The Information That HMI Collects Browsing

We may use “cookies” to help us process your order and to customize information that we may present to you. A cookie is a small text file that does not personally identify users, although it does identify a user’s computer. Cookies do not pose a threat to your computer, and they do not contain viruses. Most web browsers automatically accept cookies, but you can change this feature in your browser.

Your Initial Contact with Us

HMI will not share your name, phone number, or e-mail address from your initial contact with us with any third party, except as necessary to respond to your inquiries by one of our employees or authorized dealers. Once you become an HMI customer or authorized dealer, sharing such information with selected third parties, such as companies who help service HMI’s customers and dealers, may be necessary. Even at that time, HMI does not sell or rent lists of our customers’, or dealers’, contact information, except in the “Dealer Locator” section of our web site.

How We Use Information You Supply In Online Forms

HMI does not sell or rent its customer lists. HMI may partner with affiliated companies to offer special services to our customers and/or dealers, in which case we will share the names and email addresses of our customers and/or dealers with those partners, but we will not release any other information to them about individuals.

Of course, HMI may disclose personal information if legally required to do so or if necessary to comply with legal process served on HMI, to protect HMI rights or property, or to take emergency action to protect the personal safety of users of the HMI website or the public.
